

A poorly maintained sign projects a less than successful image to your customers. Ask yourself the following questions :

A. If a company cares so little about their public image that they will not even maintain their signage, what kind of customer services could they offer?

B. If a company can not financially maintain the signs that project their public image, am I at risk doing business with them? Would they be able to correct problems that could occur during the job cycle? Or perhaps go out of business after receiving my deposit?

C.If a company is that strapped for cash, will they be around to honor my warranty?
